

WARP (Weave A Real Peace) conference met in San Francisco last May. Among the presentations of weaving and dyeing activities in communities around the world, Rebecca Burgess, author of Harvesting Colors, reported on her Fiber Shed project. This program has been initiated in many communities here in the States, as well as Europe, Australia, and more. These programs develop cooperatives which include local food and fiber growers, individual and small business weavers, knitters, and clothing manufacturers, and other services so these communities are self-contained within a 150-mile radius, with the focus on buying or sharing locally, without dependence on over-seas manufacturing or on items shipped in from a distance. Next year's conference is in Santa Fe during the Indian Crafts Festival. The following year in Guatemala. See contact info on Page 11 to come join in.

Discount on Looms and supplies for Museums, Schools, and Charity Programs

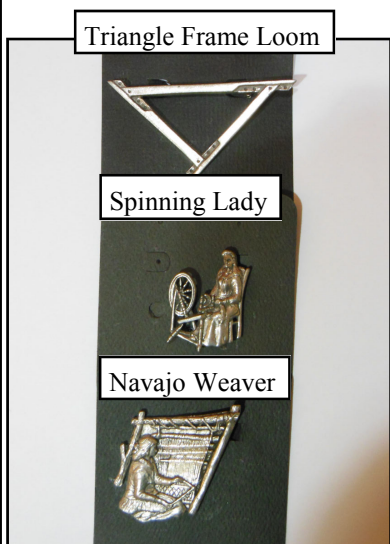

We have always felt it important to support those interested in weaving who might need a helping hand. We have donated to customers who lost their triangle loom in the Katrina floods, in tornadoes and in fires, and have always offered 10% discounts to schools, students and museums. We were delighted to help when Kim Shirley mentioned she has started a program in her rural Iowa community, which has no programs for senior citizens, in order to provide creative and useful activities for them. If you know of a good cause with people interested in weaving, please let us know. We'll be glad to help.
